

Serenity now!

A citrus-note essential oils spray to get rid of bad energy is the sweet smell of success for New York entrepreneur Adora Winqvist, who created the spray when working in customer service for a cable company.

“When customers came in and their televisions didn’t work, they’d really melt down and start yelling. That volcanic anger was tangible,” says Winqvist.

But in corporate America you can’t really burn sage, incense or candles. Winqvist created a scent as a defense to aggravation and called it “Clear Away.”

Celebrities including Katie Perry, Jennifer Lopez and LeeAnn Rimes are also devotees. “I was thinking Katie Holmes could really use it,” Winqvist said.

Winqvist’s company, Opus Gaia, is starting to sell her products to Whole Foods markets throughout the Northeast; New York is her strongest market.

A 4-oz. bottle is $15, while a 7-ml. travel size suitable for briefcases and purses is $4.99.—Julie Earle-Levine
